June 2010

New works

Recent stock acquisitions include a great range of etchings from Regina and Lily Karadada of Kalumburu, paintings by Marilyn Davies, Joseph Tjangala Zimran, Alison Napurrula Multa, William Sandy, Long Jack Phillipus Tjakamarra and a lovely bracket of works from artists of Papunya Tjupi.

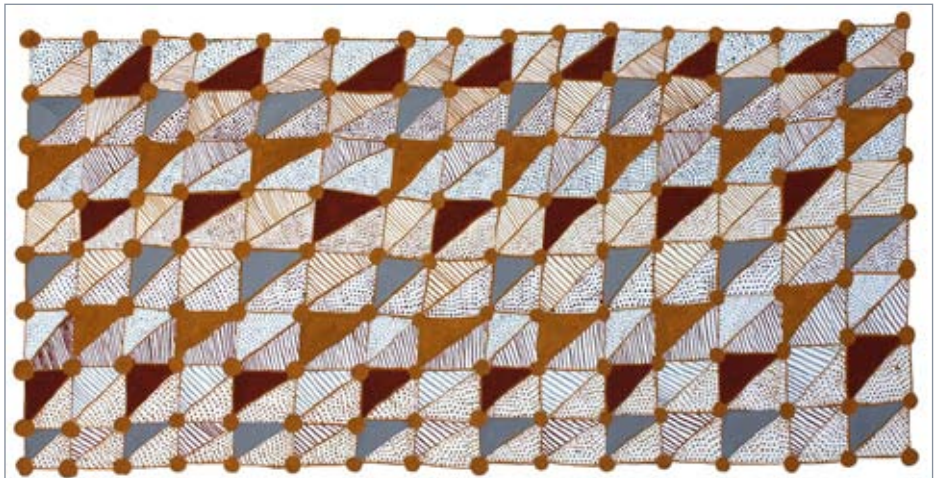

Resale royalty

June 9 heralds the introduction of the Resale Royalty where the sale of works of art may be subject to a 5% royalty charge. 90% of that fee will be reimbursed to the artist by the collection agency CAL. Art Mob believes that this legislation was introduced without appropriate industry consultation and what has resulted is quite different to a secondary market resale royalty which would generally have been more acceptable. Non-compliance can result in a draconian $125,000 fine!

Sam Juparrula Wickman

Sam's back in stock with us with some brilliant art glass works and paintings. He first exhibited with us in 2005 and his fame has since spread widely. His glass works can be found in special collections including the Queen of the Netherlands and Australia's Parliament House.

Tiwi trimmings

Our past month's exhibition "Munupi Medley" was slow so with the approval of the art centre prices were slashed by 20%. This has made this body of work very affordable. Check our web site for full details.

Affordable art

We have just reloaded the Affordable Art page on our web site with over 140 works that are less than $1000. So if you are looking for an inexpensive piece there are some little gems ready for you! And the price includes delivery to anywhere in Australia.

Art in SMSF's

The rumour is that on June 30 the Federal Government may change the rules for self managed superannuation funds to disallow new purchases of collectables. If you have spare cash in your fund then a good piece of Aboriginal art may provide a better return than some shares if hindsight is applied! We are always ready to assist you with appropriate recommendations of "blue chip" artists.
