DECEMBER NEWSLETTER 2002

Celebrate the Outback

December's exhibition will provide an eclectic range of works from a number of communities to celebrate both the festive season and the end of the Year of the Outback 2002. Artists represented include Lorna Napuralla Fencer, Walala Tjapaltjarri, Barbara Napangarti Reid, Ray Tjapaltjarri, William Sandy and Gloria Petyarre. William Sandy is one of the original Papunya artists who painted at the school prior to Geoffrey Bardon's arrival. His dingo and emu paintings show real desert dreaming with delightful flow of meticulous dot work. This exhibition will keep changing through the month. Call by, enjoy a glass of Tasmanian wine and celebrate our outback Aboriginal art with us.

Balgo Hills stock catalogue now on-line

Art Mob has built a solid reputation as having the best of Balgo and now our stock features on our web site. Sales and enquiries from the internet are now global with works going to France, England and USA. We were honoured recently with a visit from an avid Balgo collector from Sydney who flew to Hobart specifically to buy some 9 pieces after finding our web site. Check them out at www.artmob.com.au.

Kudditji Kngwarreye

Kudditji is the younger brother (now 75 years old) of the renowned Emily Kame Kngwarreye and is still painting. His Emu Dreaming paintings show the water holes of Boundary Bore in Utopia and tell the story of his ancestral totem – the Emu. His works are collected worldwide and we are honoured to have a range of his works ranging in price from $1950 to $16000.

Ceramic Earthenware from Titjikala

My recent trip to Alice Springs was a real enlightenment. One of my discoveries was a community of artists from Titjikala who produce bush friends – ceramics featuring birds, animals and daily living. A crate of 10 lovely pieces has just arrived. The women from this remote community 80km south of Alice are ecstatic that their work is being shown so far south!

Artists in residence

Following on from the visit of Gertie Huddleston and Angelina George we will have Bill Harney – a Wardaman tribal elder from south of Katherine in the gallery in January for a week. We are still negotiating the dates for another highly renowned female artist – watch this space next month!

Arnhem Land didgeridoos

Now in stock! A great range from the country where this legendary musical instrument evolved. The pieces include relief carved snakes, traditional banded and bells. Prices range from $120 to $450.

Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year from Euan and Jude.
