Alick Tipoti in town

The Malungu exhibition of Torres Strait Islander artist Alick Tipoti was well received. He's won the Telstra NATSIAA works on paper award twice and is listed in the 2008 Top 50 Most Collectable Artists list for very good reason. His linocut prints are simply sensational! Raved about by established print makers and the general public these prints are affordable and very collectable. Full details are on our website.

Web site update

Visit our website for some new pages of artists including Shorty Jangala Robertson & Paddy Tjapaltjarri Stewart. There are also quite a few reloads of artists' pages and about 150 new works in stock works pages 19 - 21. Browse & enjoy!

E-mail newsletters

Continuing the environmental theme - thanks to those of you who have requested e-mail newsletters and invitations. It saves a tree and you get the goodies earlier! Just send an e-mail requesting the change.

Pink 2008

We have some stunners this year! This is the 7th Art Mob pink exhibition - inspired initially by the colour of shoes that Simone maybe still wears in Italy. Girls, put on some pink lipstick and guys, don't (find a pink tie or shirt instead) and come and have a pink and bubbly opening on Independence Day July 4th.

Jack Dale at Strathlynn

Jack's west Kimberley paintings have certainly hit the high marks at recent auctions. We have 3 rather lovely additions to our stock that feature on the back of the newsletter. If you visit the Daniel Alps Strathlynn restaurant on the west Tamar just out of Launceston you will find 3 of Jack's paintings gracing their walls along with some works by Galya Pwerle and Kudditji Kngwarreye. All are available for purchase and you can see them on our website.

Franklin River

July 1st this year marks the 25th anniversary of Bob Hawke stopping the Franklin River hydro-electric dam project. One of the protesters arrested at the earlier demonstration along with Bob Brown was artist Ros Langford. Her painting of the Franklin River shows her rafting trip to Kuti Kina cave soon after its rediscovery. Coincidentally she has just spent another 3 days at that site which should inspire another pictorial page or two from her diary.

'Young babies wait in the sea at the mouth of the river, waiting for high tide which will take them upstream to a place called Wuni-Ari - the Wungud sacred waterhole. The babies will swim around looking for a mother and father. If they are found they are so happy, if not they will wait once again for the tide to take them back to the sea. The process is repeated until they are adopted. Wungud is a place a woman will go to dream about babies'.
