JUNE 2013

JOMEN NONA

We previewed Jomen's Marupati Gul (Spirit Canoe) linocut print last year after the artist's proof had been struck. It's now available from our stock and is one of the finest examples of linocut work that we have seen. We have 15 of these prints available currently at $1850 each unframed.

WEB SITE UPGRADES

Our website can now be read in 54 languages thanks to Google Translate (once known as Babelfish - I guess with credit to Douglas Adams). So those of you in far off places may find some of our content way easier to digest. Our "Artists" access page too has a new look. And for those who came to our very first exhibition in April 2002 it's back online again! We have also changed the hosting company for greater reliability and flexibility. Please give us your feedback!

MARTUMILI ARTISTS ARE BACK

Our June exhibition "Painting it Martu Way" launches on Friday 7th and features a wonderful selection of paintings from the west. Three works have already been reserved by an astute collector! Congratulations to Martu artists Nora Wompi and Minyawwe Miller who have been selected as finalists for the WA Indigenous Art Awards this year.

JUNE SALE

It's end of financial year again! It's a big gallery "space creator" and there are still 100 works mostly at crazy prices. Be quick!

QUESTION OF THE MONTH!

We get asked all sorts of questions in the gallery! Mary Derusha's paintings of early days of Pansy Napangardi were painted on antique Braille paper to provide a simile - Pansy's dot paintings v. Mary's dotty watercolours. Best questions were: Was the artist who painted these blind? Are these paintings for blind people? Recently Emma was asked for the price of "the indigenous painting round the corner at the back of the gallery". The visitor was most put out when Emma told her that they were all indigenous! It shows the variety that we have - both in art forms and visitors!

A BONUS FROM THE ATO

Full depreciation of new assets under $6500 each has been announced by the Australian Taxation Office for small businesses. This is a great opportunity to brighten up your office with Aboriginal art from Art Mob. Check with your accountant and beat the rush to 29 Hunter Street!

NEW NYIRRIPI'S

After our highly successful Nyirripi Now exhibition with paintings from the 2012 workshop we have just secured 13 brand new works from this year's workshop. These are well priced, both raw and refined, and special! See them under Nyirripi artists on our web site.
