KUDDITJI KNGWARREYE TJUNGURRAYI DECADE OF COLOUR

December showcases works by Kudjitji Kngwarreye Tjungurrayi in 'Decade of Colour'. Half brother or cousin to the renowned late Emily Kame Kngwarreye he began painting Emu dreamings in a dotted roundel style in the early 1980's. It's now 10 years since back problems caused him to start painting the wonderful abstract landscapes of his country that are often compared to the works of the great US artist Rothko. DID YOU KNOW?

The winner of the Wynne prize for 2013, Imants Tillers, won his award for a piece titled 'Namatjira'. This painting is a homage to Albert Namatjira (1902 -1959), one of the pivotal and tragic figures in Australian art. Through his watercolours of Central Australia, Namatjira found a way to repair some of the psychic and spiritual damage - what Kevin Gilbert has called 'a rape of the soul' - long endured by Aboriginal Australia. His body of work is an art of healing and is the antecedent to the Papunya Tula art movement, which emerged unexpectedly in the early 1970s, paving the way for the blossoming of contemporary art in its myriad forms today.' - Imants Tillers 2013. We have one last watercolour painting by Albert's direct grandson, the late Albert Namatjira Junior in stock. Be quick!
